GOWNS FOR SUMMER DAYS.

Some Picturesque Costumes Worn By Dressy Women.

Striking Examples of Prevailing Fashions Seen at the Beaches, on the Race Tracks, at Garden Parties, Afternoon Teas, and Dinners.

COPYRIGHT 1889.

Here is a dress that pretty Mrs. Marie Nevins Blaine wore on the plazza of the Brighton Hotel as she sipped a water ice and looked the picture of trim simplicity. The skirt is of the palest gray-green wash silk, with a flounce of dark green and white embroidery reaching almost to the knees; the skirt itself is gathered full and hangs straight all around without a hint of tournure or reed, being absolutely flat in the back without as much as a sash to simulate drapery. The round waist joins the skirt just under the arms by means of a wide shirred belt of the material. Old fashioned white silk knitted mitts are the only excuse for gloves worn. On her smoothly dressed blond hair coiled low on the back of her small head she wears a little turban of gray-green rough straw trimmed in the back with upright loops of intermingled dark green and white ribbons. At her waist is fastened by a silver buckle a loose cluster of golden hearted daisies. With her eyes on the surf rolling in on the beach she rises, pushes back her chair and draws about her shoulders a pale buttercup yellow cashmere shawl with silk embroidery and a deep knotted fringe of the style of the last generation.

Over at the Manhattan Rose Coghlan looks like Our Joan in her best clothes as she walks the beach in a little blue and scarlet seaside gown. The accordion plaited serge skirts are dark blue as is the snugly fitting Directoire coat with large pockets set on very far back and finished with blue and red enameled buttons. Crossing in broad folds from beneath the lapels in the vest of crimson surah, and a red-winged blackbird perches on the narrow-brimmed blue sailor hat with down and tail pointing forward.

On a piratical looking black steam yacht which darted in and out among the sailing craft to view the races of the Atlantic Yacht Club off Bay Ridge last week was a sailor-like young woman, who said "for'ard" and "aft" and "three bells" and "whole sail breeze" as if she was born on salt water. The nautical young person issued over the rail, glasses in hand, in a natty little yachting frock that was both odd and effective. Navy blue lois of Wight serge composed the plaited underskirt and the loose idonse waist which turned back from the neck in broad revers faced with baby blue. The buttoned shirt of pale blue washing silk was laced close across the throat and embroidered with an anchor in dark blue floss. A dark blue foulard scarf dotted with baby blue spots was knotted under the blouse revers and the waist was clasped by a belt with silver buckle. Over the short chestnut curls was tied a flat dark blue serge hat laid in narrow plaits radiating outward from the crown and trimmed with a bunch of baby blue ribbons. In her hands, prettily gloved with dark blue silk, she held her field glass.

Among the throngs of gaily dressed men and women who frequent the Sheepshead Bay races one may see many of the most charming hats of the season. On the grand stand the day the Dwyer colt Blackburn carried off the Zephyr stakes, sat a slender young woman whose hat of Milan braid, the straw toned a deep rich yellow by exposure to the sun, set off her brilliant brunette coloring. The flaring poke brim was lined with a soft, old-fashioned shade of green, a butterfly bow of pale green moire ribbon being placed under this low enough to rest on the hair. About the edge was gathered a deep valance of Irish point lace, yellow with age, which hung down in front, shading the eyes like the parasol hat of last season. The outside of the brim was covered with the same lace laid flat, and trimmed with bunches of green bows. This hat had a neighbor equally attractive. Over a quantity of fine dark hair drawn straight back from the brows and plaited back low on the neck in smooth loops, was set a black openwork straw hat, almost concealed by a wreath of fine white flowers and green ferns. A peasant bodice of fern green velvet and green silk gloves wrinkling at the wrist were component parts of a cool summer costume.

At the Country Club's reception on Thursday a pretty English girl looked so happy and girlishly merry and played so deftly with a fan that it was a pleasure to watch her. Her gown of primrose pink China silk was draped in long folds, the skirt and overskirt falling into one insensibly. The waist was drawn up in gathers about the neck and shoulders, and its fullness was confined by a broad sash pinned in a point just under the bust. Crisp lawn plaitings finished neck and sleeves. A wide black tulle hat was brightened by pink ribbons, and its roguish eyes beneath its brim looked out over a flight of butterflies painted on the dainty pearl-sticked fan. She wore pale pink silk gloves and her Oxford ties showed pink ribbon bows.

One of the prettiest garden hats of the season was abroad in the old box-bordered walks of a stately house which overlooks the Hudson not far above Spuyten Duyvil. Its broad brim of yellow straw turned up on the left side and the roll was filled in with field flowers—daisies, buttercups, poppies, small yellow sunflowers, blue corn-flowers and trailing grasses. The brim was lined with green and bronze ribbons. The gown worn by its owner was of chambray in broad pink and pale yellow stripes, made very simply, with open throat and lace front of pale yellow. A sash of pink surah was enough to reach almost to the armpits tied directly in front, the ends hanging down over the gown.

At a recent dinner given in honor of Mrs. George M. Pullman, the table was decked with an old turquoise crackle bowl filled with lindebells and white roses. At each cover was a small blue Nankin bowl holding mignonette and blue and white bachelor's buttons. The hostess wore a gown of soft white China silk laid in folds across the bust, leaving a modest V. A narrow ribbon sash tied just under the arms. The skirt fell straight to the floor and was embroidered with a pattern of bachelor's buttons about the bottom. The sleeves were short and narrow, blue velvet ribbons encircled the neck and were threaded in the hair.

A variation on the old theme of two-sidedness was played by shy, pretty Miss House, the adopted daughter of the writer on Japan, a young woman whose Japanese name it is impossible to pronounce or remember. Striped black and white silk and black Spanish guipure over black silk were the elements of her evening gown. The black and white material was draped to form the left side of the bodice, crossing at the waist line to make the right side of the skirt, the lace alternating in office and position in a manner corresponding. There was a black sash and a big bunch of dewy red roses.

A yellow haired woman showed some dexterity in holding her train out of the way at a small country house dance the other evening. This was partly owing to the luxuriously soft texture of the pale pinkish blue satin of which it was composed. The front of the skirt was of the same material, figured with long trailing garlands of morning glory blossoms, tinted and striped with pink, blue and white, in exquisite resemblance to the frail natural blossoms. The bodice was cut with open throat and short puffed sleeves and a thick ruching of rose petals encircled the skirt hem.

In the same set danced a black eyed blonde whose fair tinted neck was partly covered by a full vest of black dotted net held in place by pointed revers of black velvet, starting from the shoulders and clasped by a buckle at the waist line, black lace mitts came only to the elbows, leaving a stretch of round arm between glove and short puffed sleeve.

Afternoon tea has transferred itself to the country house and is just as musical and just as much given to Prowsing and other recitations as during the winter. A gown which looked well behind the urn was made of the palest shade of sea green crepe with one side of the over gown laid back from throat to hem in loose, irregular folds, rather Greek in their effect, showing a front beneath of pink and silver embroidery. Loose sleeves were finished by pink velvet cuffs and a velvet bow was tied under the left ear. A silver belt was studded with emeralds.

White crepeline makes an exquisite negligé, which is included in the trousseau of a June bride. Accordion plaited lace makes the wide, flaring sleeves which come just to the elbows. The loose front is composed of plaited lace, edged by lace cascades. About the waist comes a white silk sash with broad ends.

A pale lemon-tinted crepe is the material of a tea gown for the beautiful Mrs. Jeness Miller. The round waist is confined by a belt of grayish green velvet, as near the shade of lemon leaves as it is possible to find, very wide and running up in the back in three points, almost to the shoulders. There are loose long sleeves. The under petticoat is some white material edged with fine plaiting and faced up to the knee with the crepe. Over this comes the skirt, long enough and full enough to allow of irregular loops caught at intervals over the front and hanging straight in the back. A broad lace collar turns over on the shoulders.

Mabel Jenness, Mrs. Miller's sister, wears a tea gown of dull blue crepe with angel sleeves, plaited front, embroidered revers, Medici collar, silver belt and sash about the hips. ELLEN OSBORN.

HUNTING THE SEA-COW.

How This Rare and Interesting Animal May Be Captured or Shot.

An account came the other day of the capture, off the Georgia coast, of a manatee or sea-cow. This was suggestive to "Entrekin," an Indianapolis veteran of many outing expeditions. He says in a paper of that city:

"Manatee? Yes. I know the animal. My first introduction to their grayish majesties was in the nature of a surprise all around, at least it lacked the usual drawing-room preliminary of consent. It happened in this way: We were lying at anchor in the South Fork of the St. Lucie river, Florida, and, desirous of a change of diet, Richards agreed to row me further up the fork, if I would only fish; now, you need not smile; it was a fair division of labor, for the black bass of the St. Lucie run from six to twelve pounds, and you troll with a strong, heavy spinner and a braided line of about the gauge of a chalk line.

"It was too hot to even talk, and after a half hour's row of the crooked channel, skirting the edges of the tall reeds and grass, meeting with fair success, we concluded to return. However, as the fork seemed about to end, we determined to round a particularly high, dense point of grass and see what was on the other side, upon the principle that the really desirable fish are all 'just at the next bend.' As we slowly turned the point we slid (I use the word advisedly) upon a pair of these enormous sea cows having a quiet feed. There was an awful sputtering and boiling of the water as it closed over their huge gray-brown backs and a hasty 'back water' on the oars. The boat rocked as if it had been a mere chip on the water, and I am free to admit I was too frightened to even use the rifle at my feet.

"While the manatee is indigenous to the entire St. Lucie, the South Fork is his favorite feeding ground. A few years ago they were quite plenty even in January. They have a tremendous wake as they plow along, which gradually becomes V-shaped as they near the surface of the water to blow. A rifle-ball sent into the apex of the V will cause a very satisfactory commotion.

"Sea-cows are taken alive by stretching a wide-meshed net of 'rat-lin' stuff across the channel of their feeding-ground. One end of the net is securely fastened, while the other is simply buoyed in position. Meeting the obstruction the animal endeavors to push its way through, becomes entangled and ends a captive. Notwithstanding their great size and their weight of thousands of pounds, they are tender and must be promptly unwound and carefully looked after.

"Some years ago we had one in a staked pen at our camp on Indian river that would eat out of your hand. Bob Hoke and some of the boys built a well in the boat and took him to Key West, expecting to make a fortune, but the yellow fever and the manatee arrived at the same time. This was 'more of a draw' than they had bargained for, and they put for home."

Praying by Machinery.

They (the people of Himalayns) work all day for what would be the price of a drink in America, and their mountain huts would be considered hural lines for the establishment of an American pig. Little, low huts, thatched with straw, and not much bigger than store boxes. They do most of their cooking out of doors, sleep upon the floor, eat with their fingers, and worship Buddha in a half-civilized way. Some of them use the prayer-wheel, and this seems to be the only invention they have. The prayer-wheel consists of a metal box about as big around as one which holds boot blacking and about twice as deep. Through it a wire is stuck and this is fastened into a handle a foot long. Inside the box there is a roll of prayers written in Tibetan characters and the worshiper rattles off prayers at the rate of a hundred a minute by giving the handle a twist and setting the box to rolling. Each roll records a prayer. Every prayer does away with one or more sins and puts a brick in the pavement which leads toward Heaven.—F. G. Carpenter's Letter in N. Y. World.

Many-Hued Oranges.

It is stated on what seems to be responsible authority that the brilliancy of our Florida blood oranges is due to the artificial introduction of coloring matter into them while growing. That is a suggestion that opens up wide and long vistas to the imagination. If oranges can be made red, why not blue, or terra cotta, or Nile green? And if these things can be accomplished the orange will become a feature of decoration that will be calculated to cut out the rose and the lily, and even the chrysanthemum! Moreover, if oranges can be colored they can surely be flavored at will. Might it not as progress is made in modifying the plain, original orange, be possible to alcoholize the orange? The very suggestion is enough to start a boom in Florida. If it could be carried out—let us optimistically say when it is carried out—the orange will become the royal of the apple of the Garden of Eden in its sodnotions.—N. Y. Graphic.

H. G. Gillett, of Purdy, Mo., says Swift's Specific cured him of Eczema on his limbs and body. He took only two small bottles.

A VERY PLUCKY LAD.

A Boy of Twelve Captures a Villain at the Point of a Pistol.

The little village of Galuc's Landing, Chicot County, Ark., was the scene of the following event: A gentleman named Wilson Gabrello, residing a short distance out of the village, had occasion on a certain morning to drive to a neighboring town, taking with him his wife and leaving the house in charge of his daughter Ella, aged fifteen, and son Henry, a lad of but twelve years.

Henry was absent two or three hours in the woods during the morning gathering fuel, and on his approaching the house with a huge bundle of sticks in his arms he saw a tall, stout and coarsely-dressed colored man jump from the kitchen-window and start on a full run for a piece of woods several hundred yards to the east of the house. Suspicious of some evil the lad dropped his wood and made for the house where he found his sister bound hand and foot and gagged. Realizing the infamous outrage to which she had been subjected he sped to some neighbors and related all he knew about it besought them to attend to his sister, and then rushed back to the house, secured a revolver and dashed boldly after the villain.

Some men who had heard his story armed themselves and proceed in the direction taken by the colored man, but Henry had got a fair start and went on as fast as possible. The men soon lost sight of him, and after searching the woods several hours in vain returned to the house and anxiously awaited the return of the boy. It was not until sundown that the little hero came in sight. He had captured the rascal and was driving him toward the village at the point of the revolver.

A purse was made up and given to the little fellow, who had the gratification of seeing his prisoner securely locked in the county jail.—Cor. Philadelphia Press.

COMMENCING WEDNESDAY, JULY 17th,

And continuing TEN DAYS, we will sell any suit of Clothing in our store for

than marked price. We must reduce our enormous stock, and we know how to do it. It's a heavy loss to us, but a nice gain to our friends who take advantage of it.

Every Suit is Marked in Plain Figures at just exactly what we have sold them, every one of them, during this season, and this is a fair and square offer. To test us bring some friend with you who has one of our fine $15.00 suits and see how gracefully we will sell it to you during this "⅓ off" sale for a Ten Dollar William. Just listen to what a slaughter this will make:

Our Good	$ 5.00	Men's Suits now go for	$ 3.33

This sale will beat our wonderful ⅓ price sale last year by wonderful values, because the base of prices is so far less now than then. Our regular $10.00 Suit now, was a $15.00 Suit then. In our "⅓ off" sale you buy it for $6.66—in the ⅓ price sale then it cost you $7.50, and so it is all the way through.

IN OUR SHOE DEPARTMENT we can and will undersell any concern in the country. You know how we CAN do it, since we bought the stock at about half its value, while other people paid $1.00 for $1.00. Then don't it look reasonable that we are able to undersell ANY PERSON all the way from 20 % to 50 % ? Well, the only question is, Will we do it? We most emphatically say we will, and if you don't believe it come and see for yourself. TERMS CASH. One price to all alike. No jewing or dickering.

Complete and Overwhelming Success

IN OUR SPRING BUSINESS!

Crowds of buyers attest the fact: Honest effort must receive public encouragement, and we have acquired strength in our progress. Owing to our long experience in the business we naturally have advantages over other buyers, which enable us to sell many articles of Clothing for less money than some dealers buy them for. And we desire to say right here that during our whole business experience we have never bought goods so low as our Spring Stock, and we are going to give our patrons the benefit of it. Suits we have heretofore sold for $20 we are going to sell for $15. Suits that are advertised as being great leaders for $12 to $11, we are selling for $10. We are not selling at half price, but an examination of the quality we are giving one would think we are doing more than that. We are not only selling Clothing cheap, but Furnishing Goods are cut to the bottom. Look at the Pearl Shirt we offer for 50c, which can not be duplicated in this town for 50 per cent. more money. The Race for Treasurer.

Republican campaign speakers are harping upon the Tate defalcation from every stump in the State and are determined to hold the Democratic party responsible for the faults of a thief who was detected and exposed by his own party. Since the Republicans, however, are forcing this issue, the Democratic State Committee has issued the following circular:

REPUBLICAN DEFAULTERS.

Hon. E. C. Fairchild, Secretary of the United States Treasury, in response to a resolution of the House of Representatives, reported that Republican officials, had, from 1866 to 1881, defaulted for the enormous sum of $11,108,696.77. Below are a few cases culled from the report:

Arthur Guiot, Assistant Treasurer at New Orleans, La., defaulted for $561,212 07.

F. E. Spinner, United States Treasurer, $339,267.46.

A. J. Auxis, Marshal District of Kentucky, $40,515.06.

G. N. Carlton, designated depositary at Little Rock, Ark., $223,671.76

E. R. Snyder, Treasurer Branch Mint, San Francisco, Cal., $152,327 03

Joshua F. Bailey, Collector Internal Revenue, Fourth District of New York, $201,203 09.

Louis H. Collins, Collector Internal Revenue, Third Louisiana District, $673,861 79.

B. C. Saunders, Collector of Customs, San Francisco, Cal., $92,256,12.

R. M. Kelly, Pension Agent for Kentucky, about $62,000, which was made up and paid by his friends.

In 1859 Benjamin D. Peck, State Treasurer of Maine, defaulted for about $10,000. His securities settled with the State through a committee of the Legislature, of which James G. Blaine was chairman, for $37,000. The case is fully reported in the reports of the Supreme Court of Maine. The Republican Secretary of State of Oregon, embezzled $20,000 of the State's money, in 1870. Thus it will be seen that our pious Republican friends are pretty handy with their fingers when they get them into the public treasury. The Republicans of Maine seemed to be proud of their dishonest Treasurer, for they increased their majority in the very next State election.

Deafness Can't be Cured

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness, (caused by catarrh,) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O

The Kanawha river overflowed in the narrow valley at Parkersburg, W. Va., and the Johnstown disaster was repeated on a small scale last week. Sixteen persons were drowned and $500,000 worth of property destroyed. On Sunday a canal dam in the Hocking Valley, Ohio, gave way and flooded the country for 20 miles. No lives were reported lost, though much railway and other property was destroyed.

The Legislative Race.

Esq. H. B. Clark, the Republican candidate for Representative, will have no opposition from any source. Messrs Boddie, Richardson and Barrott have all declined and there will be no Democrat put into the field before the election, which transpires less than two weeks hence. This being settled and there being no doubt as to who will be our next Representative, the KENTUCKIAN has a word or two to say about Mr. Clark. For some years he has been a justice of the peace in the Bainbridge and Belleview district and with this exception has never held office. He belongs to the most respectable element of his party and is a citizen of moral worth and solid character. He was not a candidate, but his party leaders had been taught a few rather severe lessons in the past and in casting about for a man who would satisfy the people, rather than the cliques and bosses, Esq. Clark was found and brought out as a man possessing the necessary requirements. He is a moral man, a sober man, who votes against liquor whenever he gets a chance, goes to church on Sunday and refuses to get down to the customary methods of electioneering by patronizing saloons. All of these things, it may be added, do not please some of his own party associates, but they suit the people and have made him strong with decent men everywhere, regardless of party affiliations. Having forced the dominant party to nominate a good man, the Democrats have accomplished about all they would have done by electing one of their own men and the KENTUCKIAN congratulates Christian county upon the prospects she has of being creditably represented in the next legislature. Esq. Clark is a staunch Republican, but he is not a blatant partisan of the rantankerous type.

He will receive many complimentary votes from Democrats and will go to Frankfort as the representative of the whole people. The KENTUCKIAN feels confident he will appreciate the added importance of his position and will consider himself the chosen guardian of the interests of a constituency not limited to his own party ranks.

D. Howard Smith, Francis Reidbar, E. A. Graves, Geo. W. Norton, and Jno. P. Morton, five of Louisville's most prominent citizens died last week. The last named was a brother of the President of the L. & N. Railroad Company, and one of the wealthiest men in the State.

The Columbia Herald says Colson, the Republican candidate, was too young to be in the army, but he remained at home and "sheltered and fed soldiers of the Union and guided them to places of safety in time of danger." As Colson claims to have been born in 1862, he must have "fed" soldiers by sharing his milk bottle with them and "guided" them by the strength of his lungs.

The Ladies Delighted.

The pleasant effect, and the perfect safety, with which ladies may use the liquid fruit laxative, Syrup of Figs, under all conditions make it their favorite remedy. It is pleasing to the eye and to the taste, gentle, yet effectual in acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly For August 1889.

The completion and dedication of the national monument to the forefathers, at Plymouth, Mass., the corner-stone of which was laid thirty years ago, gives timeliness to the well-written and beautifully illustrated article on "The Pilgrim Fathers" which leads off this number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. Arthur V. Abbot interestingly describes the new cantilever bridge over the Hudson River at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. "The Military Road of the Caucasus," by P. J. Popoff gives a picturesque account of this marvelous highway of Russia's Asian conquests. Foreign Wilkinson, of the Navy, gives a valuable and authoritative account of "The United States Hydrographic Office; its Evolution its Aims and its Achievements." Other illustrated articles are: "An Old French City" (Bourges); "In the Acadian Land"; "Turenne," Louis XIV.'s great generals, etc. The short stories, illustrated poems, miscellaneous essays, etc., are up to the first-class standard, and the new literary department begun in this number promises to be a valuable feature.

A Liberal Proposition.

[Clarksville Progress.]

Hopkinsville is making an effort to establish a gymnasium for the boys and it is said that the girls of that village are heartily in favor of the move, so much so that they agree to get up an entertainment, ice cream supper, just anything to help raise the money. The girls over there are quoted as saying that the Hopkinsville boys "hav'nt strength enough in their arms to help a girl over a stream." Shame on such boys! Clarksville boys never fail to embrace—an opportunity, so if the Hoptown girls will only wire us at any moment we agree to come and pay the fare both ways.

We have upon our table that most complete work for the ladies of every household, Godey's Lady's Book, for August, 1889. It is always too full of good things for any paper to mention or even give a brief outline of them all. A charming frontispiece greets the eye upon opening the book; besides a handsome colored fashion plate, colored work designs, and black fashion plates. The reading matter is always of the purest. This magazine is one of the best, and should be in every family. Address Godey's Lady's Book, Philadelphia, Pa.

Morgan's Men.

It is proposed to hold, at Winchester, a reunion of the members of Morgan's Cavalry who were imprisoned in Ohio or Pennsylvania, and the following invitation has been issued:

WINCHESTER, KY.—Dear Comrades: You are cordially invited to meet in Winchester, Clark county, Ky., on the 1st of August, 1889, the survivors of Gen. Morgan's command who, during the late war, were confined in the penitentiaries of Ohio and Pennsylvania. The Confederate soldiers and other citizens of our town and county join us in this invitation, and will help to make you our honored guest. We will write to all whose address we can get. Say to any comrade in confinement who does not hear directly from us, that he is wanted.

Answer at once and say that you will come, that we may have quarters ready for you. Start so as to reach here on the 31st of July, that you may begin the day with us on the 1st of August. Very truly yours,

The mysterious "Jack the Ripper" turned up in London again the other night and cut the throat of his eighth victim. He escaped and wrote the police that he had seven more to kill before he surrendered.

The residence of Mr. J. W. Beasley, in the Montgomery district, together with nearly all of his household and kitchen furniture, was consumed by fire last Monday night. Mr. Beasley discovered the fire about midnight when the roof of his kitchen was falling in. It is supposed to have caught from a defective flue. His loss is estimated to be about $1,500. Insurance about $1,000.—Cadiz Telephone

How Tom Marshall Once Upon a Time Detected a Burglar.

"Tom" Marshall was at one time the favorite hero of the bar in Kentucky. His acumen, his wit, his magnetic powr over a jury, whether he happened to be drunk or sober, gave rise to numberless anecdotes about him. One of the least known is the following:

Marshall, after a prolonged holiday, found himself in a little inland town, the center of an admiring circle of newly-made friends who were ignorant of his real position or occupation. Chief among these was a young dentist, a hard-working, frugal fellow, who, by dint of strict economy, had saved a few hundred dollars. He was about to be married, had bought a snug little house, and withdrew his money one day from the bank to pay for it.

The bargain was to be completed on the following day. He carried the money to his chamber, a small room back of his shop, and, locking up the roll of bills in his secretary, went to bed.

About midnight he was wakened by the flash of a dark lantern in his face. He sprang up. A man was climbing out of the open window. His desk was open and rifled. He rushed upon the thief, who fired at him twice and escaped. The poor dentist, on the eve of his wedding-day, was left dangerously wounded and penniless.

The county was searched for traces of the thief, but in vain. Marshall took a keen interest in the matter, questioned the policemen closely, and when they gave up in despair, asked permission to visit the dentist's rooms. After a close search, he found upon the floor a small pellet of burned paper, which he carried home. It was the wadding out of the thief's pistol. When examined, it proved to be half of a receipt for water-tax, signed by John Jones, town clerk.

The date was entire, but the name of the man paying his tax was torn off, excepting two letters, Pu——. Marshall at once searched the records of the town clerk, and found on the given date Peter Scott had paid his water tax. Peter was arrested, and the money was found in his possession.

Marshall soon after left the village, followed by the blessings of the grateful dentist and his bride. Long afterward they discovered that their friend was the famous eccentric lawyer of Kentucky.

Another story which lingers in the gossip about the courts in the same State is of an old lawyer named Hunt, who, in the early part of this century, was known as "the sleuth-hound," so unerring was his pursuit of a criminal. On one occasion he was employed to defend a poor colored porter in a bank, accused of robbing the vaults after the cashier was gagged and tied.

The circumstantial evidence was complete against the negro, but Hunt was convinced of his innocence. The thief, too, had dropped a bit of cloth on the floor, apparently the torn lining of a hat, about which Hunt's keen scent detected a faint, peculiar perfume.

"The man who wore this is a tanner," he said to a detective.

There was but one tannery within forty miles. One of the owners was a dissipated young man. He was watched, and was soon detected in passing some of the stolen money. Being arrested, he confessed his guilt, and Hunt's client was saved.

The old saying, "Murder will out," is true only when some intellect is acute enough to gather the proof of guilt from trifles which other men neglect.—Youth's Companion.

Bethel Female College is likely to have a larger patronage than for years. President Rust returned from the National Teachers' Association Friday and has arranged for an increase in the number and power of his faculty. However so long as Dr Rust is at the head of the institution no fears need be entertained about the equipments.

He assures the public that he will retail drugs and medicines cheaper than similar houses in the surrounding cities and towns. An experience of 40 years in the business is a sufficient guarantee that the above statement can be relied upon. Mr. W. E. Anglen an experienced prescriptionist, has been retained in that capacity.*

CREAM OF NEWS.

The Criterion Dead.

The Criterion at Pembroke has suspended publication. Cause: want of patronage.

A Miscellaneous Collection.

The chief of police showed us a collection of fire arms etc., yesterday, taken from prisoners who after being released failed to call for their property for "various" reasons It consisted of half a dozen pistols, several unlawful pocket knives, burglar's tools, razors, rules, pictures, twine, watches, &c.

Carefully Looked After.

These personally conducted excursions which have long been a feature of the Chesapeake & Ohio R. R. must not be confounded with the "rushing" excursions run from all over the country by other roads, where every one is expected to look out for himself and do the best he can. Great pains will be taken to make everyone as comfortable as can be, and ladies who desire to make the trip need have no fears about lack of attention.

A "Mashee" Mashing Rock.

James I. Barbour, the man who eloped with Mrs. Malone, a married woman of Tennessee, and remained at Cusky for some time, was tried before Esq. Thisby Friday and entered a plea of guilty to the charge of adultery and was fined $20, which he is now working out on the rock pile at $1 00 a day. Barbour is very much enamored of the woman and says he is going to hunt her up again as soon as his time is out, as he still loves her and will not be separated from her.

An Old Plog.

While board makers were sawing up board timber from a large red oak on the Bucker farm, a few miles east of the city one day last week the saw struck a flinty substance, which upon examination was found to be a locust plat which had been driven into the heart of the tree forty years ago according to the ring estimate A "Hoo doo" bag containing human hair, water melon seed, a few pebbles and a few pieces of pine bark was also found. The seed were in perfect condition, but the "flag," on being removed, fell to pieces.

Identified and Held Over.

Chas. Smith and Jack White, the two men arrested last Wednesday night having in their possession six pairs of pants and other merchandise of a suspicious character, had an examining trial Thursday. Messrs Horner & Parker, clothing merchants at Sebree, were present, identified the goods as their property and the men as the two who were in their store on the day of the theft. The prisoners were held over and will be sent to Webster county to answer the charge of grand larceny.

Shot a Mule.

A mule hitched to Sam Holloway's wagon was shot by some one Saturday morning, who dropped the pistol and escaped in the crowd. Walter Whitlock and several other colored boys were arrested and tried before Judge Brasher but all managed to swear themselves clear of the charge. The Whitlock boy, who was caught with the pistol, said the shooting was done by "a town boy," who was loading the weapon when it went off accidentally. The boy ran and he picked up the pistol. The mule was not badly hurt, being shot in the breast. Chief Campbell has the pistol.

Bachelor Wins.

As was announced, the great race between Bachelor and Cleveland took place at the Driving Park Friday afternoon and was witnessed by about 200 people. Several thousand dollars changed hands on the result. A slight shower just before the race made the track a little heavy. Bachelor won the first and second heats, Cleveland the third, and Bachelor the fourth, winning the race easily. Bachelor is owned by Buckner and Cleveland by W. T. Ridgedale Each horse had his favorites and backers who when an opportunity afforded cheered lustily. Quite a pleasant afternoon was spent upon the grounds when the crowd returned to the city, where the "fa" and "ands" of the race were discussed in full.

A Preacher Falls Dead.

A Bowling Green special of Friday says: Rev. Dennis Spurrier, after having gone through Mammoth Cave last night and when nearly out suddenly dropped dead, with heart failure. As he crossed the bottomless pit he fell and never moved afterward. His intention was to have preached here Sunday. Mr. Spurrier was born in Louisville in 1811 and was therefore 48 years old. Early in life he attached himself to the Methodist church and in 1861 joined the Louisville Conference. He was far above the average among the preachers of the church. He was stationed at different times at Hopkinsville, Henderson, Glasgow, Louisville and Bowling Green, going from the latter place to Owensboro. He was married last Wednesday at 2 p. m. to Mrs. Myra McJohnson and had gone to the Cave on a bridal tour.

MATRIMONIAL.

Mr. T. J. McReynolds, of Decatur, Ill., and Mrs. Mary Johnson, of Allensville, were married Thursday the 18th. They will reside until fall at the residence of the bride.

Married, on the 11th instant, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. George Hendricks, Mr. Pinkney Boyd, only 17 years of age, and Miss Georgia Hendricks, only 15 years of age.—Cadiz Telephone.

DEATHS.

ANDERSON—At the residence of her parents on South Main street, at 12:30 a. m., yesterday, little Janie McHenry Anderson, only child of James H and Annie Waller Anderson, aged 20 months. She had been sick for about a week with flux, which proved fatal in spite of all the best medical skill could do. Little Janie was an exceptionally bright and sweet child. She was the pet and idol of the household and her death falls with crushing weight upon her doting parents. She had just reached that interesting age when her childish prattle and toddling footsteps made the sweetest of music for the father and mother who loved her so much. But by some inscrutable dispensation of an all-wise Providence, their little darling has been taken from them. In the sorrow that has befallen them, they have the heartfelt sympathies of many friends.

The funeral services of the little one were held at the Baptist church yesterday afternoon by Rev John O. Rust. Interment at the City Cemetery. A large concourse of friends attended the obsequies.

BRAME—At his residence near Casky, at 8 o'clock Sunday morning, July 21, Mack Brame, aged about 48 years. He had been ill about a week with flux. Mr. Brame was a substantial and influential farmer, universally respected and esteemed by his neighbors He was a gallant Confederate soldier and has many old comrades in this section who remember him with the strongest feelings of affection. He leaves a family.

CHERRY—A three year-old daughter of Dr. Wm. Cherry, near Lafayette, died suddenly in Louisville Thursday while visiting friends there with her mother The remains were brought home for interment Friday

STITH—Infant child of John W. Stith, near Hahbridge, Friday. Remains interred in the City Cemetery.

FOSTER—Infant child of D E Foster in the Antioch neighborhood, Friday aged 6 months.

COLORED.

Fannie Smith, near Beverly, Saturday, aged 17 years.

Infant of Blanch Bland, near Church Hill, Saturday night.

The Cadiz Telephone Line.

The telephone line to Cadiz was finished Saturday night and at 6 o'clock Penny Turner had the pleasure of talking over it from the other end. Mr. Turner has long cherished the idea he hasat last carried through to success, and the pluck, patience and progressiveness manifested by him calls for the highest commendation from all. It is a pity Hopkinsville has not more such workers as he. With the same amount of work and application from some energetic young man, the capitalists of the city might be induced to put some money into a street railway, now our great want next to the waterworks. The new telephone line was free all day Sunday and the wires were kept hot with messages. The way stations are also connected. The line is 20 miles in length and is owned by a stock company.

Judge Bennett Very Ill.

Judge Caswell Bennett, of the Court of Appeals, was taken with an attack of hiccoughs last week and on Thursday his condition became dangerous. The hiccoughs became more violent and painful and weakened him greatly, but a day or two ago he became better and has not since had a relapse. Judge Bennett married Miss Mollie Crumbaugh, of Eddyville, who is well-known in this city, having relatives here whom she visited frequently before her marriage.

STORM FRIDAY NIGHT.

Two Barns Burned and Other Damages Done by Lightning.

A destructive thunder storm visited a portion of the county at 8 o'clock Friday evening, which was accompanied by blinding sheets of lightning and a perfect deluge of rain. The electrical display in the elements was grand and magnificent to behold. The child trembled with fear and the awful crashes of thunder struck terror to many of the stoutest hearts.

In the city the only harm done was the killing of a horse belonging to Jerry Wilson, col. The telephones rattled and jingled, but were not injured.

A few miles from town a wire fence around a lot of Mr. J. O Cashman's was struck, the current passing around the entire fence and splitting every post.

Mr. W. A Lowry's barn on the Bowles place near Casky was struck by lightning and burned. It contained a lot of hay, two wagons and some implements. Loss about $700 with no insurance. About three miles further away the barn of Mr. Rezin Elliott was also destroyed. Mr. Elliott heard the crash and in three or four minutes looked out and saw his barn in a blaze. It was quickly consumed with its contents. In it were 2,000 lbs. of hay, various farming implements, a reaper, a rockaway, and a large lot of harness and gearing Loss estimated at $600 with no insurance.

The lightning rod on W. B Kennedy's house in the same vicinity was struck and rattled in a terrifying manner as the current passed down. Mr. Kennedy felt of the rod afterwards and found it hot enough to burn his hand.

Another house or barn further onwards Fairview also burned, but it has not been learned whose it was.

At Mr. Dority's, on the P. A. Cushman place, a current of electricity passed down the chimney, knocking down several members of the family, but doing no serious damage.

The storm seems to have extended from a little west of town to the eastern line of the county at Fairview, though heavy rains are reported from as far up as Trenton.

Hopkinsville to Send Her Usual Number of Excursions to Old Point.

The number of persons who have given in their names to go to the Sea shore Aug. 7th, compares favorably with former parties and as new names are being added daily of our best people the Hopkinsville delegation will take the lead as usual. The Old Point excursions were originated from here, and the large numbers who have gone on these excursions at once shows that our people are not slow to take advantage of a trip which affords so much enjoyment for so little expenditure. Below is a list of some who intend taking the trip which will be added to daily: S. C. Mercer and two daughters, Judge H. R. Littell, Sam Dicken, Jno. Morgan and wife, Miss Flora Trice, Miss Madge Fairleigh, Mr and Mrs. W. A. Wilgus, T. E. Hartley, Geo. O. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs W. F. Randle, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Pritchett, Miss Mamie Thompson, Miss Lelia Mills, Tom Petree, Jno. Lipscomb, Prof. M. L. Lipscomb, Hanson Dulin, Dr. W. H. Matthews, Dr. E C. Anderson, Jno. Scargent, J. P. Bragg, C. P. Deering, W. H Ely, Ollie Brown, Joel McPherson, W. O. Harlow, Wm. Grable, J. W. McGehee, R S. McGehee, Hugh McGehee, J. W. Wood, J. N. Childress, Robt. Mason, E L Wilkins, E. F. Glenn, a party of several from Cadiz, and many others from the county.

Remember it is very necessary for you to give in your name in order that proper provisions can be made for your comfort. Mr. T. E. Bartley, Kentuckian office, will assign you sleeping car berth upon application.

Knights of Honor.

We are glad to learn that Mr. W. F. Randle, State Deputy G. D., is meeting with merited success. He will on Tuesday 30th inst., organize a Lodge at Trenton, Ky., and the citizens of Pembroke are working up an application for a charter for a Lodge at that place.

With the record this order has made in the United States in the past 16 years, the wonder is that every man of moderate income does not apply for admittance into its ranks The Lodge at Hopkinsville is composed of some of our best citizens both in the city and country. It seems to us that the membership of this Lodge should be at least four fold greater when we take into consideration the benefits that have been paid to the widows and orphans of its deceased members. We predict a forward movement under Mr. Randle's work.

TO preserve the richness of color or delicacy of tint of your summer dresses, make suds of hot water and IVORY SOAP, allow to cool until lukewarm, then wash your dresses in the solution. Ordinary soaps contain too much alkali, which in a short time bleaches the color and destroys its beauty. Prof. Silliman, of Yale College, says, "The IVORY SOAP can not injure the most delicate fabric."

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory'," they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

HIS RUGGED WAY.

A Peddler Meets a Temptation-Proof Woman of Polish Origin.

He had a rug under his arm as he came along to where a Polish woman stood at the gate in front of her shanty. They looked at each other for a moment, and then he said:

"Madam, I have walked three miles to offer you the greatest bargain of your life in rug."

"Ja!" she replied as she went on with her knitting.

"This rug, madam, came from Smurny. I don't exactly know where Smurny is, but I do know that it is a sort of Oklahoma where they build rugs which stand in any climate and never fade. If the dog sleeps on them. Madam, this rug is only six dollars."

"Ja!" she replied.

"Only six dollars, and on the installment plan at that. Pay me one dollar down and you can then fork over at the rate of a quarter a week."

"Ja!" she murmured as she changed feet.

"Madam, do you want to be the envy of every Polack in Poletown? Do you want your social status lifted forty-five pegs inside of forty-five minutes? If so invest in this rug. It combines beauty, convenience, utility, durability and social standing. Madam, behold the tiger in the center! Isn't that a work of art?"

"Ja!" she answered, never even raising her eyes.

"While your home is humble," continued the man, "it need not necessarily be devoid of taste. One such rug as this will go farther to prove your æsthetic nature than four busts of Abraham Lincoln. Madam, you will never regret its purchase. Is it a go?"

"Ja!"

"Madam, do not miss the golden opportunity now extended to you. There are rugs and rugs, but when will you ever again be offered a rug like this—a rug right from the fertile slopes of Smurny—for the small sum of six dollars, payable in installments, covering a period of one hundred years, if you ask so much. Pause and reflect.

"Ja!" she answered, as she kicked off one of her wooden shoes and rubbed her foot against a picket.

"Then, madam, farewell—a long farewell! The opportunity will never come again, and you must'n blame me. I come from Pole to Pole to offer you the greatest bargain on earth. You have declined it. Hold me blameless."

And as he shouldered his rug and went his weary way she kicked off the other shoe, looked up and down the street in a vacant way, and whispered: "Ja!"—Detroit Free Press.

Graphophone and Phonograph.

The graphophone, which is a sort of uncomplicated phonograph, is coming into practical use in the offices of a few stenographers in this part of the country. The man who takes the notes, instead of dictating to the typewriters, sits down and talks into the machine, and the cylinder on which his remarks are recorded is then turned over to the typewriter, who sticks a tube attached to the machine into each ear, and working the roller by a treadle as she would a sewing machine, has whatever is there talked off to her as rapidly or as slowly as she can take it down. In practice it is said that a stenographer can dictate to the machine in an hour as much as a rapid typewriter can transcribe in three or four hours. The time thus saved is so much clear gain for the stenographer, and in a case where a copy is needed in a hurry the work can be done by the employment of enough typewriters in a third to a quarter of the time that would be necessary if the stenographer had to dictate his notes to a single typewriter. The graphophone and the phonograph are controled by the same company, which refuses to sell outright, and which charges such a high price for the rental of the instruments that stenographers who have not a large business hesitate to try the machine.—N. Y. Sun.

—A strange case of protective alliance in animals is given by a South African traveler. A Dutch trader, at a distance from camp and unarmed, was menaced by a huge lion, when a troop of baboons suddenly surrounded him, and faced the lion with such horrible outcries that the mighty beast was glad to beat a retreat. The baboons then scattered, resuming their occupation of digging nuts and roots.

JUSTICE TO MRS. JOB.

A Woman Deserving a Better Place Than She Has Ever Occupied.

Job was a wonderfully-afflicted man, but, as a partial compensation for it, he has had the sympathy of the human race for four thousand years. But it has not been so with Job's wife. Nobody has ever spoken a kind word of her. On the contrary, she has been held up for forty centuries as a horrible example. But for all that we are confident the poor woman deserves a better place in history than she has ever occupied. If she was sour-tempered she had enough to give an acid tinge to her disposition. She was made to drink the dregs from a bitter cup, and it is possible that she bore her troubles with about as much equanimity as the average woman would do.

In the first place, she was suddenly reduced from luxury to penury. Any unfortunate woman who has suffered this ordeal knows just the frame of mind Mrs. Job was in.

In the next place, she was bereft of her children. There is no grief so burdensome as that which falls upon a mother's heart when the grave hides her children from sight.

In addition to this accumulation of sorrows, she was left with an invalid husband on her hands. Job was covered with boils, and experience has taught us that there is no more exasperating patient than a man with a boil on him. There are wives, and good wives, too, in this Christian land of ours whose lives have been made most unbearable for days and weeks at a time by a husband and one boil. Just think then what this poor woman had to endure with a husband with perhaps from five hundred to one thousand boils on him! Is it any wonder that the woman encouraged her husband to terminate his existence? The only wonder is that she didn't cut her own throat in despair.

But these were not all the troubles that Job's wife had to bear. Her husband's friends came on a visit to him and took possession of the house for six weeks at a time. Other women, and good women, too, have had to endure the same affliction, and they can easily account for Mrs. Job's exhibition of bad temper. Job got worried with the three visitors himself, and yet he didn't have to wait on them, to clean up their rooms, to wipe the tobacco juice from the parlor carpet every day, to sweep out the mud they carried in on their boots, and to submit to the thousand and one annoyances that a male visitor gives the housekeeper.

It is about time that somebody was raising a voice in defense of Job's wife and saying a kind word for the poor woman, who for four thousand years has suffered the slings of unjust criticism in uncomplaining silence.

There are a great many Job's wives in the world to-day; we meet them every day. They may not have husbands with boils on their bodies, but they have husbands who go to the clubs of evenings. They have husbands who are selfish enough to devote all their time to business and pleasure without considering that a portion of that time of right belongs to the woman, the charm of whose existence is his companionship. The Job's wives of to-day are the women who are burdened with the cares and sorrows of this life and who get no sympathy. And their name is legion.—Ladies' Home Companion.

Mr. John Aitken is a very ingenious gentleman, but some of his discoveries have a tendency to make one feel creepy. He has invented an instrument by means of which he is able to make a number of calculations of the most uncomfortable kind. With the aid of this apparatus he is able to count exactly the particles of dust in a sunbeam. In a cubic inch of space near the ceiling of a room he found 88,340,000 atoms of dust, and in the same space of a Bunsen flame 489,000,000. Such discoveries make us dread the air we breathe. Not long ago Mr. Aitken proved that in the atmosphere of a room when the gases are lit in the evening there are as many particles in each cubic inch as there are inhabitants in Great Britain and that in three inches from the gases of a Bunsen flame the particles of dust are as numerous as the number of people in the world. It would require more courage than is averagely possessed to state the quantity of dust we inhale with every breath.—London Globe.

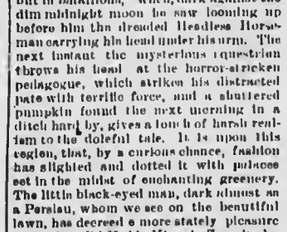
Jay Gould Romps About the Grounds of His Country House With the Children—The Poker Players of Wall Street. Russell Sage as a Horseman.

COPYRIGHT 1886.

Once upon a time, and not so very many years ago either, the traveller along a certain maple-shaded road in the beautiful town of Irvington-on-the-Hudson, which derives its name from Washington Irving, the gentle genius who idealized this whole region, might have seen a short, slightly built, dark complexioned man, with piercing black eyes, playing with two children on the stately grounds of a palatial country-seat. The children, a boy and a girl, are turning a rope and the gentleman jumps with the agility of a romping school girl. Then they all stop and break into merry laughter. It is a beautiful spot; the grounds are laid out in elegant parterres; the lawn is closely cut and fragrant; the landscape would charm him who is wise enough to be a lover of nature. At no great distance in the road which the shaded, green-eyed schoolmaster traversed in Irving's "Sleepy Hollow" on his way to court Katrina, the rosy-cheeked daughter of prosperous old Myneer Van Tassel; and it was on a fateful night on this same lonely highway that the pedagogue, having just received the billets from Katrina, realized that "troubles come not singly but in battalions," when, dark against the dim midnight moon he saw looming up before him the dreaded Headless Horseman carrying his head under his arm. The next instant the mysterious equestrian throws his head at the horror-stricken pedagogue, which strikes his distracted pate with terrific force, and a shattered pumpkin found the next morning in a ditch hard by, gives a lone bit of harsh realism to the doleful tale. It is upon this region, that, by a curious chance, fashion has alighted and dotted it with palaces set in the midst of enchanting greenery. The little black-eyed man, dark almost as a Persian, whom we see on the beautiful lawn, has decreed a more stately pleasure dome than did Kubla Khan in Xanadu, by Alf, the sacred river. It is a man famous in two hemispheres—Jay Gould. He flings aside all restraint as if under the spell of one of Cotton Mather's witches in whom, by the way, the ancient inhabitants of this sompiferous region implicitly believed. He jumps the rope, he plays "tag" with the children, he romps like a school boy. His daughter Nellie and his son Edwin are his companions in these juvenile pranks which reveal the man at his best.

All that is past now; the children have gone out into the world. But in a few years the same interesting spectacle may be witnessed by astonishing wayfarers, for Mr. Gould has two grandchildren. To-day, however, Jay Gould is a morbid man whose character is, so to speak, petrifying. He is becoming a miser. He enjoys taking a drive with his daughter-in-law Mrs.



GOULD AND HIS GRANDCHILDREN.

Georgia Gould nee Edith Kingdom, formerly a well-known actress, but his chief amusement now is his business.

Russell Sage likes fast horses. He wears black goggles to prevent the gravel from flying into his eyes as he drives a spanking span up the Boulevard. He has a weakness to be thought a great horseman. He drives well.

George Gould is a member of the New York Athletic Club and is very regular in his attendance. He is well built and greatly enjoys the exercise at the club rooms. Edwin Gould's hobby is cavalry. He is a member of a troop of horse in New York which he thinks will yet rival in popularity the Seventh Regiment.

Addison Cammack is wholly indifferent to sport, unless it consists of worrying the bulls in Wall street.

Jesse Isaac and Joseph Seligman, the bankers, are good equestrians and are often seen cantering in Central Park.

William Rockefeller, of the Standard Oil Company, has a private racing track and many fast trotters, as is well known. One of his horses has a record of 2.14¾.

Thomas W. Pearsall, who made a million dollars in Manhattan Elevated Railroad stock some years ago owns "Edwin Thorne," a horse that has made a mile in 2.14. William R. Travers, the famous wit of Wall street, had a good many thoroughbred horses, and was a sportsman in the strictest sense. His stable was infested with rats and it occurred to him that it would be a good idea to get a dog that would rid the place of the nuisance. He agreed to buy a dog which was offered to him provided he should prove a good ratter. The dog, a small animal, was brought to the stable and soon ferreted out a rat of unusual size which proved to be a ferocious fighter. The rat was actually getting the best of dog when Mr. Travers, who stuttered, cried out with delight:

"I don't w-w-want your d-d-dog. I'll b-buy the r-r-rat."

August Belmont, the representative in this country of the Rothschilds has a stud farm on Long Island and gives more time and attention to horses than any other man in Wall street. He owns many good horses, some of which are fast.

Dr. W. S. Webb married the youngest daughter of the late William H. Vanderbilt who inherited ten millions from her father, and now he has sixty horses, some of which are good trotters. The doctor was poor but handsome and agreeable, and the rich man's daughter speedily fell in love with him. Now they live in a palace at the corner of Fifth avenue and Fifty-fourth street, which cost $1,500,000.

S. Morris Pryor, the son of Colonel Pryor of Lynchburg, Va., and a cousin of General Robert Pryor, drives a "P" cart and is a member of the Coney Island Jockey Club, the New York Yacht Club and the Westchester Polo Club at Newport.

A great many stock brokers attend the base ball matches. There is a Stock Exchange box and members having a book of admission tickets, costing $30 for the season, assemble there. Stock brokers have penchants, however, as various as the moods of human nature. Henry Clews the banker and broker likes to play ball with his children in the grounds attached to his palace in Thirty-fourth street near Fifth avenue. He isn't more than ten years old among his bright and beautiful children. Charles M. Foster, sometimes called the lightning calculator of the Stock Exchange is a great fisherman. Henry G. Trevor is a great lawn tennis player and likes to give bachelor parties to young ladies. Rich bachelors of New York reciprocate social attentions in this way, as is no more than fair. The last "bachelor party" which Mr. Trevor gave was at Delmonico's and delighted the young ladies and their chaperones. It cost six thousand dollars. R. L. Hoskman, of the Stock Exchange and a member of an old New York family, is the champion lawn tennis player of America. Daniel Starr is the champion billiard player of the Stock Exchange. He married a daughter of Peter Gilsey, after whom the hotel was named. Wilbur Bacon was a member of the Yale College boat crew. R. W. Schack, another Stock Exchange man, was, at one time champion amateur oarsman of New York State and is a powerful athlete. He put up one of the heaviest dumb bells made ten thousand times.

A good many financiers and stock-brokers are sea-dogs in their way. Some of them make long cruises in their yachts. Commodore Arthur E. Bateman owns the steam yacht "Meteor" and lives a great deal of the time on board of her. He has cruised from Labrador to the river Amazon. He was formerly in the United States Navy and is of a bold and energetic character. James Smith, ex-President of the Stock Exchange and ex-Commodore of the New York Yacht Club, owns the yacht "Estelle." Thomas W. Pearsall owns the "Banshee," an Irish name, meaning spook. She is a fast sailer. Roger Maxwell, President of the Central Railroad, of New Jersey, owns the very fast sailing yacht "Shamrock," Washington E. Connor, Mr. Gould's old partner, is a veteran yachtsman. Mr. Gould long ago presented his yacht to his son George. J. Pierpont Morgan, of Drexel, Morgan & Co., bankers, owns the big steam yacht "Corsair," which is about 500 tons register, it is an expensive luxury keeping a yacht. Mr. Morgan's probably cost him a hundred thousand dollars, and I presume that it costs $2,500 a month to run it. This would include fuel, provisions and wages for a crew of say thirty men. Captain of these pleasure yachts are paid from $100 to $125 a month; first mates, $45 to $50; quartermasters, $35; sailors, $30. Some financiers have yachts on the inland lakes. Alfred Sully, who is worth six or seven million dollars, lives at Hackettstown, N. J., but comes to New York daily, has a 60o yacht of this class and entertains his friends royally.

Stock brokers are apt to be fond of a quiet game of cards. The champion poker player of the Stock Exchange is David Barnes. Charles J. Osborn, the stock operator, was a great player. He died worth seven millions, being the only one of Jay Gould's brokers who was shrewd enough to keep the fortune founded upon his commissions. Mr. Osborn managed Mr. Gould's celebrated corner in Northwest stock, when the latter squeezed the bears till their tongues seemed to run out. Mr. Gould, by the way, in speaking of this corner once said, in his customary low tone of voice and dryness of enunciation "I considered the stock cheap at 80 and began to buy. People were disposed to sell it down. My brokers had orders to buy. Before I knew it they had bought a good deal more than there was. Then the price began to go up. I think it went to 230. I think I was induced to part with some at that price." Mr. Gould smiled faintly at the recollection. It was assuredly a liberal act to permit any one to "induce" him to "part with some" at more than three times as much as he paid for it. The bears felt sore over that experience for years. "Charley" Osborn, as the eldest of Mr. Gould's brokers, made the furry brethren fairly howl with disgust. They had sold themselves into the deepest kind of a hole and their only recourse was to take hold of the rope that "Charley" Osborn let down to them and to pay handsomely and try to look happy. This famous broker used to play high poker with Jordon L. Mott, the iron merchant, who is now worth about five million dollars. On one occasion, years ago, I heard Mr. Osborn won twenty-five thousand dollars from Mr. Mott at one sitting. It was a trifle to the merchant, many times a millionaire, and he rose from the table with the jovial remark:

"That's nothing. I'll go down and mark up the price of pots."

Calvin S. Brice, the railroad President and Chairman of the Democratic National Committee in the last campaign, has a great poker player, and together with Ex-Congressman James O'Brien, Colonel William Brown of the News and others have some pretty high play at Delmonico's, at Fifth avenue and Twenty-sixth street, the limit being fifty dollars. A loss or gain of two or three thousand dollars at one of these games excites no comment. DEX.

LIFE-SAVING DEVICES.

A Gun to Throw Lines from the Shore to Shipwrecked Vessels.

Woolwich Arsenal is surely the last place in the world likely to be connected with experiments in life-saving apparatus. And yet yesterday afternoon a party of gentlemen, including several Government officials, attended within the confines of that mighty storehouse and manufactory to witness the trial of a new pneumatic gun, designed not to throw dynamite shells, but a light steel bolt, with a cord or life-line attached thereto. It need scarcely be further explained than to say that the object of such a gun—it would be a misnomer to call it a weapon—is to assist in establishing communication between ship-wrecked vessels and the shore, between vessels themselves in a heavy sea-way, when a hawser for towing has to be passed, to assist drowning persons in boating and ice accidents, or to throw a rope into the upper window of a burning building to rescue persons from the flames.

Such are the purposes for which the pneumatic gun has been designed by its inventor, Commander John D'Arcy Irvine, Royal Navy, who claims that it is more certain than any rocket apparatus and handier and lighter than the ordinary line-throwing mortar apparatus. The new gun weighs about ten pounds, and with triped, reel and line, and compressed-air steel cylinder complete, only fifty pounds. The compression of gases in very thin steel cylinders has been wonderfully perfected of late years; so that there is no difficulty in procuring vessels charged up to one hundred and fifty or two hundred atmospheres. Alongside the canal, close by the rocket store-houses and gun butts, was the scene chosen for the life-saving apparatus experiments. The gun comprises a slight, straight barrel of steel, about one and one-half inches in diameter by four feet long, with an enlargement to about three inches in diameter at the breach for a length of some six inches. The breech end has a valve and tap, by which connection is made by means of a small coiled copper tube, with the compressed-air cylinder, wherein the propelling charge is stored until it requires to be drawn upon. A hollow steel bolt, like a very thin tube, closed at one end and with a screw thread on the other, is then inserted into the gun, the threaded end first.

To the closed end or cap, which remains projecting two inches out of the muzzle, the life line is attained in the ordinary way, the strands of the cords being carried along the side of the gun barrel on a ring, from which they pass to the reel placed under the gun. The threaded end of the missile is firmly gripped by movable correspondingly-grooved jaws at the breech, a quarter turn of a handle serving to lock or unlock the hollow bolt. When the jaws are closed the hollow bolt is practically screwed into the breech-block, the whole being hermetically sealed. The compressed air is then turned on, passing into the breech and inside the hollow tube, which has thus become, so to speak, like a rocket surcharged with potent gases, the air pressure being about two thousand pounds on the square inch. When the handle is moved and the jaws are unlocked off the bolt flies with a gentle explosion and whizz, dragging the life line after it, the elevation of the gun being just over thirty degrees; the course described in flight is a well-marked parabola. Three shots were fired yesterday with comparatively low pressures, as the gauge indicated, and in each instance the bolt and line flew precisely in the direction aimed, falling in the center of the canal at ranges, as measured, of 215 yards, 125 yards and 150 yards distance consecutively. The apparatus appears extremely simple, light and safe.—London Daily Telegraph.

Servant—Two gentlemen at the door want to see you, sir. They didn't come together; just happened along at the same time.

Householder—How do they act?

"One on 'em is awful polite, sir, and begs the favor of a few minutes' conversation."

"I don't want to see him; he's doubtless got something to sell."

"The other, sir, is stiff as a ramrod, sir, and don't waste no words."

"He must have a bill. Tell 'em both I'm not at home."—N. Y. Weekly.

"E Pluribus Unum" on Coins.

Did you know that the legend E Pluribus Unum, which has appeared on different United States coins, was never authorized to be so placed by law?" said a numismatist. "It was first used in that way in 1786. There was no United States Mint then, but there was a private one at Newburgh, N. Y., and the motto of the United States was first placed on a copper coin struck at that mint. Very few collections have specimens of this coin. They are very valuable. In 1787 a goldsmith named Brasher coined a piece which was known as the sixteen-dollar gold-piece, and the motto, placed in this form, 'Unum E Pluribus' was stamped upon it. The coin is worth to-day $2,000, and only four are known to be in existence. In 1787 the motto also appeared on various copper coins of the State of New Jersey. The State of Kentucky had some peculiar copper coins which were minted in England in 1791 and bore the national motto. The United States Mint was established in 1792, but the use of the motto on coins was not authorized or directed by any of the provisions of the act establishing it. The motto had not appeared on any of our coins since 1837 until the present silver dollar was coined. It remained on our early gold and silver coins until 1834, when it was omitted from the gold coins. In 1836 it was dropped from the silver twenty-five-cent piece, and the following year from all silver coins.—Philadelphia Press.
